San Mateo County Supervisor Don Horsley visited Pacifica Friday to see firsthand the clean-up work done by the community as part of Earth Day.

City Manager Steve Rhodes and Pacifica Beach Coalition President Lynn Adams showed him around town.

Beginning the tour at Papa Murphy's, they met business owner Raj Naicker, who has for the last three years performed a neighborhood cleanup with special diligence on cigarette butt pick-ups.

Next, they traveled to Mussel Rock to see beach and street cleanups.

They visited the Manor District where a very thorough clean up had been done on neighborhood litter.

They toured Cabrillo School, where they observed an Earth Day wall that lists projects taken on by families.

This year the students studied endangered species and listed the projects they did to protect them.

They visited the high schools, saw the pampas grass clean up near the Moose Lodge and saw how almost every neighborhood from the tip to toe of Pacifica was beautified in some way from the community clean up.
